Artist Bio:

Reinilda Blair is a Dominican-born, New York–raised artist based in Alpharetta, Georgia. Working primarily in acrylics, sculpture, and immersive installations, her practice explores themes of ancestry, spirituality, and cultural memory through a contemporary lens. Blair’s work has been exhibited widely across metro Atlanta, including the Emma Darnell Aviation Museum and Conference Center, Arts Clayton Gallery, ArtsXchange, and Fulton Government Center. As both artist and curator, she has organized and participated in exhibitions that highlight underrepresented voices, and visionary practices often absent from the mainstream art landscape. Blair’s approach is both personal and universal, inviting audiences into layered narratives of transformation, resilience, and collective identity.

Artist Statement:

Rooted in my Dominican heritage, my art is a dynamic exploration of diverse cultures, intricately weaving narratives that celebrate life, confront the inevitability of death, harmonize with the wonders of nature, and delve into the essence of being human and spirit.
